Local Historic District Report

Local Historic District: Pill Hill

Applicant: Linda Miller

Address: 89 Highland Road

Statement of Significance: The three single family homes on Highland Road were built in the mid-1920s. Numbers 81 and 89 appear to have looked identical when originally built, but they were designed by different architects. Alvin Brodin was listed in the 1920 Boston directory as a carpenter from Roslindale. Frederick Freeman, the architect of record on the permit for number 89, may also have been a carpenter. Both houses were constructed by Mary McLaughlin, who lived in 89 with her husband Patrick. His business was listed as “autos”. The first owner of number 81 was W.H. Gould, a fireman.

Proposed Alterations: Application for a Certificate of Appropriateness build c. 87-inch wide addition onto pantry extension on rear of house and add new window and a door that will face the stairs.

Applicable Guidelines: “Alterations and additions should be compatible with the character of the building and earlier additions in terms of size, scale, massing, material, location and detail. The original portion of the building and earlier additions should continue to be recognizable apart from the addition by means of massing, articulation of setbacks, trim and ornamental detail. Additions should be designed so that the primary elevations of the original building remain clearly delineated... Porches and porticos should not be enclosed or glazed.

Visibility from High St

Preliminary Findings: The rear is visible from High Street, but the proposed adding of c.10 feet to the back of the house is not incongruous with the design or massing. The roof and stairs will remain.

approximate location of new addition.
